IT COULD HAVE BEEN MORE ILLUSTRATED THOUGH. 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Good book for aviation enthusiasts and people who like to read about military matters By Gabriel le Roux I have been interested in buying this book for some time. The rating reflects the fact that I am not disappointed with it. I like the informative text as well as the illustrations. There is also a good account of the Falklands War. However, I am disappointed in the scant information about the Cheetahs obtained from the South African Air Force. I recommend this book to aviation enthusiasts in general and fans of the Mirage family of aircraft in particular. People interested in military matters will also enjoy this book.

For more than four decades, different versions of the classic Dassault Mirage fighter have served as some of the most potent combat aircraft in Latin America. Equipping the air forces of seven South American nations in significant quantities, the delta-winged jets have seen action in various different wars and internal conflicts, and they continue to fulfill their mission with a number of operators. This book tells the story of all the members of the Mirage family in service with Latin American air arms, with individual histories of the air arms and their constituent units that have operated the Dassault-designed fighter, as well as its Israeli and South African derivatives. The volume provides a comprehensive collection of color photographs and profile artworks that cover all the variants, plus maps, and tables that illustrate the individual stories of all the aircraft, their units and their various weapons.

About the Author Santiago Rivas was born in Buenos Aires, Argentina in 1977. Twenty years later, the Journalism graduate started to work in the fields of aviation and defence journalism - travelling all across Latin America to conduct his research for articles and books. In 2007 he published his first book, which was about the Malvinas/Falklands War, for a Brazilian editor - and since then, another 12 have been published across the globe in Argentina, Brazil, France, Germany and the United Kingdom, while four more are soon to be released. He has also had articles published in more than 50 magazines in 20 countries - and he currently works for more than 20 of the magazines. Santiago has three children and lives in Buenos Aires. He continues to travel every year to most of the Latin American countries to fulfil his research-based work.
