About the Author Lolita Edith Mayer was born in Ogden Utah. At a young age her family moved to Oakland, CA. Lola began expressing her love for art the first moment she held a pencil. Lola and her two younger sisters Irene and Ruth sat for hours after school and on weekends drawing. Lola loved designing and sewing clothing. She won a scholarship to Madame Lucilles School of Design where she refined her dress designing talent. Lola learned the practical and whimsical sides of fashion. Not only were the dress lines important but also incorporating the practical side of zippers and buttons. Lolas world was influenced by Art Deco. Her designs reflect that influence with fashions of soft flowing lines and those of a sculptured tailored look. Lolas love of art continued throughout her life.
